Target Audience:

Specialties: General Oncology
Professions: Nurse/APN, Other

Description:

The MD Anderson Cancer Network Nursing Education Series is designed for oncology nurses at MD Anderson Cancer Network Partner and Certified Member sites and provides evidence-based oncology content. This learning activity will include information on a quality improvement project designed to reduce infusion pump alarm fatigue related to air-in-line alarms caused by intravenous etoposide. Negative outcomes of frequent air-in-line alarms will be discussed, as well as national patient safety guidelines related to clinical alarm management. The importance of evidence-based practice as well as a patient-centered approach to identifying solutions will be emphasized.

Learning Outcome:

80% of the learners will articulate increased knowledge of an evidence-based quality improvement approach to reduce infusion alarm fatigue in an inpatient oncology unit.
